Planning and conducting experiments in the classrooms is extremely helpful to understanding design and analysis of experiments concepts.

A three-factor block factorial design was planned and conducted in three classrooms with statistical students at the Federal Rio Grande do Sul University in Brazil with the purpose of introducing factorial designs and the mixed models methodology in the group experiments analysis.

Individual and conjoint statistical analysis of the data was carried out according to the design and with previous checking of underlying assumptions.